Andy White's

MANAGEMENT OF MINERAL EXPLORATION

This book started life in 1984 at the Australian Mineral Foundation, sold out, reprinted in 2007 and is still the only complete single text that attempts to bring together all the key aspects of managing mineral exploration, with over 335 pages of helpful and informative information designed as a must read for anyone involved or interested in Australian mining.

Andrew White is a consulting geologist, management consultant and company director. He is a graduate of the University of Sydney (BSc Hons, 1962) and the University of New England (PhD, 1967). He has worked in mineral exploration, petroleum exploration and mining since graduation, with field, managerial and academic roles. In 1998 he was awarded the Australasian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy's President's Medal for his work in developing and teaching of mineral exploration management. He is a Fellow of the Australian Institute of Geologists, a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, a Fellow of the Society of Economic Geologists and Graduate Member of the Australian Institute of Company Directors. Andy lives in Brisbane, Queensland, with his wife Elizabeth; they have two married children and three grandchildren.

Exploring for new mineral deposits is an enthralling and challenging business based on science, finance and creative human endeavour. Discovery holds the promise of great wealth and benefits to society. Unfortunately, mineral exploration is also a very high risk enterprise, and failure is more common than success. For a long time, the industry has lived with a dismal average of one in one hundred exploration ventures finding a mine.

This book is about managing the process of mineral exploration to minimise risk.
